Association Update

Hello after a long hiatus! AMT is active again, sporting an updated logo, a new executive director (Marilyn, marilyn@mactrainers.com), and a renewed commitment to AMT's mission. We plan on publishing this bulletin bi-monthly; please let us know if there are topics/issues you'd like us to address.

New AMT Logo

In keeping with our renewed activity, we have reworked the AMT logo. Following Apple's lead, it seemed time to stop bleeding in six colors and go with a cooler, sleeker, more subtle and contemporary color gradient. We have attached a copy of our new logo here - scale it to size and, if you have a web page, use it in your link to AMT's site (<http://www.mactrainers.com>).

Mac OSX Training

Apple Certified Trainers are teaching Mac OS X training courses at the University of Central Florida in July.

BrickShooter Discount

The puzzle game BrickShooter has been modified for Mac users and is now being offered to AMT members at a 20% discount.

Membership Update

We have recently been working on updating our member list - most of you have been contacted and asked to confirm/update your information. If you haven't been contacted, or as changes occur, update your AMT record online by going to <http://www.mactrainers.com/members/update.html> and then use your member ID number as your password to access your record.

Please join us in welcoming 16 New AMT Members!
